

AARON WOLF-BLOOM

ABOUT ME

I am running for regional board because I love creating social action programs, and I want to be able to lead them for more people across the region. I am also running for regional board because I want to further develop my leadership skills, as well as to become more involved in such an awesome community. I am passionate about social action, and I hope to share that passion to help others around the region connect with it.

My experience includes 2 years as the SAVP serving on my TYG board (SALTY). During that time, I led programs on a variety of topics from racial justice to climate change. I also participated in a number of national and regional social action programs and trainings. Last month, I co-led a NFTYx social action event with the CWR board. Working with the regional board helped me improve my communication, leadership and event planning skills.

Adults I have worked with include my youth group advisor, Educational Rabbi and other committee leaders at my synagogue. I collaborate with them to get their insights and recommendations on programs I plan. I have also worked with Diane Fisher, who is the head of the Silicon Valley Jewish Community Relations Council. I am very comfortable communicating with adults, and will not hesitate to ask questions or get assistance from them in order to create the best program possible.

One social issue the region should address next year is climate justice. This issue includes working to limit climate change, helping those most affected by climate change, as well as creating a healthy and sustainable world. We feel the effects of our warming climate year after year as wildfires rage in our region, and we need to take action. I want to help the region partner with climate friendly organizations so we can do our part in protecting the Earth.